ABSTRACT:

1. A copy of ACSI-DFIRE report 2200000045, entitled Foreign Relations, obtained from a 27 August 1964 debriefing of DS-2144 has been deposited in the Library. [The report includes information on a study DS-2144 was directed to make prior to his assignment to Burundi concerning the African countries which were likely to establish diplomatic relations with Communist China.] ACSI-DFIRE has forwarded copies of this report to US Army representatives (USARMLO and USARMAs) for release to Special Military Intelligence Section, Hong Kong (British); Republic of India Military Intelligence; and Nationalist Chinese Military Intelligence. Requests for release of this report to foreign nationals should be directed to the Army member of the Interagency Defector Committee.
2. A copy of this report has been furnished to each member of the IDC by the Army member.

12. (S) CHEN Yi estimated that the African states were 1/3 pro-PRC, 1/3 pro-GRC and 1/3 neutral.

13. (S) The Chinese Communists considered Soviet efforts in Congo a failure and had given Congo up for a loss. After CHANG Yen (1728-3601) arrived in Burundi, however, Chinese Communist interest in Congo became active. CHANG is the Chargé.

14. (C) The Chinese Communists overestimated the propensity of African states in following France's initiative. As a result, all Chinese Communist embassies in Africa were directed to maximize their efforts to cultivate favorable relations. Nearly all countries requested aid. CHOU En-lai and CHEN I told them that aid requests should be made through diplomatic channels - subsequent to recognition and mutual establishment of relations. Newly emerged African states do not wish to be typed as French lackeys. If Tunisia had not recognized Red China before the French, it might have stalled.

50X1-HUM

16. (C) The Chinese Communists were formerly not interested in UN membership because the USSR dominated the scene and CPR interests were well represented. Thus there was no need for the CPR to wrest leadership control. Now, however, the situation is different. In Chinese Communist jargon, it is therefore necessary to "stoke up another stove." CPR interests in the western hemisphere were centered on Brazil (at least until the coup) and Canada.
